

CAREER & TECHNICAL EDUCATION

Orange-Ulster BOCES CTE Signing Day

The Orange-Ulster BOCES Career and Technical Education (CTE) is holding its first Signing Day in February, 2020.

What is the purpose of the signing day?

Signing Day is an opportunity for CTE graduates to meet with prospective employers as an alternative to post-secondary education. Students with clinical or internship experience with businesses associated with their CTE concentration may potentially be signed by businesses as future employees.

Signing Day is the culmination of a student's successful educational experience and a celebration for the hard work and achievements of graduates resulting in commencement and employment.

Signing Day is an exciting event for students and their families. Businesses will create opportunities for students to secure future employment while completing their high school education. Signing Day removes the pressures associated with finding employment post-graduation.

Similar to collegiate athletes who are drafted and signed by professional organizations, Signing Day offers a memorable experience for students to sign with employers who recognize their success as students and skills as future employees.

The Orange-Ulster BOCES shares in the success of your students and is happy to participate in this unique opportunity.